The writers of fistic sport at the ringside were a notable array, with veterans of years of experience sprinkled among them, while scattered about the vast oval were hundreds of fans who have witnessed ring contests dating back to the palmy days of Sullivan. Even among these fans were many who have been in the game itself. Yet of all this fistic talent, from the point of being trained observers, hardly two saw the happenings of Saturday night alike; while opinions as to the merits of the bout, its result in the favor of one contestant or the other, are nearly as much at variance as there were witnesses. Damon Runyon, for instance, thinks the contest was a draw, but declares it was a "poor affair." Jack Curley, of the New York World, favors Gibbons as the winner but hints that it was a moving picture affair more than a real fight. The New York Sun brands it as a fake, and refers to the bout as a "siapping match." The New York Telegram is of a similar mind, while P. T. Knox, writing for the latter paper, calls the bout a draw.

Bat Masterson of the New York Telegraph, to whom many decisions are left by those who are strong for wagering on such sporting events, does not pass particularly on the quantity or quality of the bout itself, but rules a draw.

It appears to be generally agreed that 50,000 fistic fans of both sexes assembled last Saturday night in the Motordrome. Brighton Beach, N. Y., for the purpose of witnessing a glove battle between Mike Gibbons of St. Paul and Packey McFarland of Chicago.

All accounts agree, also, that both ring warriors were present in ring costume and apparently fit to box, so far as physical appearance went, that all stage settings were in order, and that true to schedule, Gibbons and McFarland proceeded to get busy when the bell sounded for them to do so.

Lot of Opinions.

The rest of the affair, both as to what actually happened during the 30 minutes the boxers were on their feet and immediately after, or which, if either, had the betser of the muss, appears more or less of a blur, more in fact, after one has finished reading the various accounts and has talk, ed with some of those who were present.

The writers of fistic sport at the ringside were a notable array, with veterans of years of experience appears more of the speriment to steal away the money of the public; as the open sesame for robbery, cheating and dissension it has been a howling back to the palmy days of Sullivan. Even among these fans were many who have been in the game itself. Yet of all this listio talent.

As to Gibbons and McFarland they As to Gibbons and McFarland—they are two of the cleverest men for their weight in the ring today and it has long been an axiom of the boxing ring that two clever men never can put up what might be termed a satisfactory battle. The average fan wants action and the delivery of blows that shall count for their effectiveness beyond any question of doubt. These are the blows that the average clever ringster cannot deliver, for the physical makeup of the boxer is such that only rarely is one developed who can punch hard and at the same time stand far out beyond his fellows because of his out beyond his fellows because of his so-called ring science. The qualities of punch and cleverness do not as a rule go together, though there have Not K. O. Men.

Neither Mike Gibbons nor McFarland Neither Mike Gibbons nor McFarland have ever been known as "knocker-outs," despite the fact that they have scored K. O. blows during their long careers in the ring, consequently any bout in which men of this type are pitted is bound to be more or less unsatisfactory. And it appears to be the consensus that Saturday night's affair was not up to general expectations.

there was not a spur to keep them to their work or to drive them to show their best.

Whether they did their best, there is a wide variance of opinion, as has been stated. "To my mind, it was a fake pure and simple," said one fan who was at the ringside. "I do not think either man was trying and that they were boxing merely for the moving plotures. I think Gibbons could have defeated McFarland had he tried, in fact, did have the better of the affair in the fact that he landed the cleaner blows, but he pulled his punches something wicked. He did not appear to want to injure McFarland, and missed so many times that I wondered how he kept a straight face. If my guess is not a bad one, the pair will try the thing all over again somewhere else, but just where I do not know."

Another Boston man who saw the bout hands this as his opinion:

"They were not trying, and many of those about the ring were not backward in saying so. Gibbons did a lot of missing, while McFarland's endeavors were confined to slaps with the open hand and much pulling of the gloves across Gfbbons' face when at close quarters. As a real fight, it was a farce."

Nothing is said about points in the Nothing is said about points in the Queensberry rules, but as the men on Saturday night were boxing for points, or supposed to be, we must turn to the Amateur Boxing association rules, which state: "The points shall be for attack, direct clean hits with the knuckles of either hand on any part of the front or sides of the head or body above the belt."

These rules, while apparently not enforced Saturday night, figure nevertheless in forming a conclusion as to which man had the better of the encounter from the standpoint of boxing, counter from the standpoint of boxing, and as McFarland used the open hands and Gibbons landed with his knuckles,
